full and useful life is made possible by the broad cultural, social, recreational and avocational training available at Guilford College.

Here students find something to remember, but more than that, something to live by. There is no value in hours, unless they are well spent, nor worth in labor divided in cause. Every student must strive to gain confidence and develop his personal values.

Dr. Hobbs, the first president of Guilford College said:

"To make a contribution to the intellectual and moral force of the people whom she may reach, to stand for scholarship and quiet assurance, and to exert whatever power we have for the development of independent thinkers and unwavering adherents to the Christian faith and practice, are reasons enough for Guilford's being."

Nestled in the gently rolling Piedmont plateau, scenic Guilford College has a special charm—perhaps it is the college lake, perhaps it is the glistening of the stone walks after a refreshing rain, perhaps it is the majestic oak trees which frame the campus, or perhaps it is merely the overall atmosphere which infiltrate the minds and hearts of those who view the institution in all its tradition and glory . . .

127 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS

Guilford College has had a long and memorable history in the 127 years that it has been in existence. It is fitting that we look back on some of the notable events of the past which have made Guilford college the thriving, liberal arts institution that it is today.

The original name of Guilford College was New Garden Boarding School. Nathan Hunt and Jeremiah Hubbard were the instigators of the construction of the school, which was sponsored by Yearly Meetings in the United States and England. The charter stated that there should be coeducation, teacher training, provisions for scholarships, and a selected student body

In 1837, the construction of Founder's Hall was completed. There were two superintendents and three teachers to instruct the limited number of students. It was a small, but significant beginning.

"In the early days, Nathan Hunt brought the school financial and spiritual aid, Dougan and Asenoth Clark (Superintendents) brought it well being, and Nereus Mendenhall brought it intellectual eminence."

There were many near economic disasters to New Garden Boarding School. However, someone was always there to rescue the institution from despair. The valiant efforts of Jonathan and Elizabeth Cox, and

PLACES GUILFORD AMONG THOSE AT

EDUCATION

Isham Cox, kept the school in running order in those tremendously hard times of the Civil War. During the war, Francis T. King of the Baltimore Association to Advise and Assist Friends of Southern States came to North Carolina. He stayed, to become the leader of the movement for financial aid to New Garden Boarding School. As Mr. King helped with expansion of the school facilities and financial needs, Dr. Lewis L. Hobbs and Dr. Joseph Moore developed the liberal arts and sciences within the school.

Thus, in 1889, New Garden Boarding School was able to become Guilford College. Dr. Lewis L. Hobbs was the first president. He and his wife, Mary Mendenhall Hobbs, expanded Guilford College into a vigorous and enterprising institution. The whole of Dr. Hobbs' administration was a building period. Memorial Hall, Mary Hobbs Hall, the Library, King Hall, and Cox Hall were built between 1897 and 1912.

Dr. Hobbs became president Emeritus in 1915, after having established Guilford College upon a firm foundation. Dr. Thomas Newlin became president. He was shortly followed by the distinguished Dr. Raymond Binford. It was under Dr. Binford that Guilford developed its new curriculum. The three-course curriculum, which was started with the college, blossomed forth into a new and broader program of study. From this evolved the present core curriculum, which is the basis for the broad, liberal education one receives at Guilford College today.

In 1934, Dr. Clyde Milner became President of Guilford College. Under his able leadership, Guilford College has strived to meet the difficult challenges of the modern world. There has been a great deal of transition and growth over the past two decades. New buildings, financial aid, an apt faculty, worthy and responsible trustees, plus a student body with inquiring and stimulated minds, have made Guilford College an institution worthy of praise.

THE TOP.

During its 127 years of continuous educational activity the leaders of Guilford College have emphasized the distinctive American liberal arts approach and they continue the belief that liberal arts training is the basis upon which specialized, professional, and indeed all future learning rests. This educational concept is concerned with the development of the total personality and includes at least five areas of the learning process. To make the student aware of the historical orientation of man's intellectual and spiritual achievements . . . to introduce him to basic recurring ideas and problems confronting him and to the attempted solutions that man has given to his intellectual and spiritual queries . . . to inform the student concerning the basic scientific methods and data that have been collected about nature and man . . . to cultivate continually an appreciation of his rich and significant aesthetic heritage . . . to teach him to attain an ever deepening insight into his moral and spiritual nature.

Learning and the complete growth of students are greatly facilitated when the community of teachers and scholars is relatively small and where the individual can be identified and made a responsible creative unit of the fellowship.

Today great stress is being placed on excellence. For this to be more than a mere slogan it must be achieved through high intellectual, social, moral, and spiritual performance. This excellence is also reflected in the quality of the fellowship and in the mutual acceptance of the high purposes and goals of the community of scholars, and finally attested by the developed high-mindedness of the alumni of the liberal arts college.

Many years ago a motto was chosen for the college and it is impressed on every document that uses the official seal of the institution. The motto is "I am applying myself to wisdom and virtue." It has always been and still is the high hope that each Guilfordian will give evidence of the penetrating influence of this motto on his life.

Clyde A. Milner
President, Guilford College

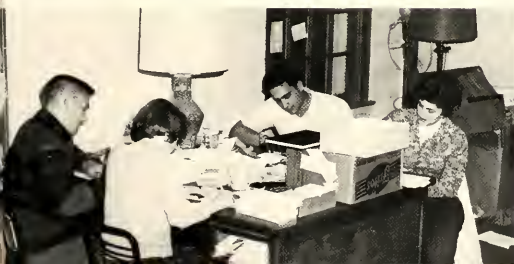

Guilford College represents an idea that is not realized in the stone of its buildings, nor the accumulated wisdom of its library or faculty, but in the minds of the young men and women who attend the South's only Quaker college.

A black and white photograph of a large lecture hall at Guilford College. The hall is filled with students seated in rows of chairs, facing a stage. On the stage, there are several chairs and a podium. The text "GUILFORD COLLEGE" and "Greensboro, North Carolina" is overlaid on the image.

DR. CARROLL SPURGEON FEAGINS

DEDICATION

Prologue—The youthful Plato encountered his learned friend Socrates returning from Delphi and immediately drew him into conversation.

Plato—Anaxagones and I were discussing the merits of a good instructor, and we appeal to you to aid us in our quest by showing us a perfect teacher.

Socrates—First Plato, we must determine exactly what is meant by a perfect teacher.

Plato—I am not sure that I know, and that is why I asked your help, but it would appear that a good teacher is one who presents clear and organized lectures.

Socrates—Surely this is not all you mean, for even the sophists present organized lectures.

Plato—Well then, in addition, he believes that man can improve himself by learning.

Socrates—Do you mean this as the sophists do—that learning affords a better means of deceiving those around us?

Plato—No Socrates, that is not correct at all. What I believe is that a man can enrich his life through an open-minded confrontation with the ideas of great minds, and that a good teacher is one who can present these concepts so that his student may best comprehend and appreciate them.

Socrates—And how shall this be accomplished?

Plato—First, and perhaps foremost, it must be the duty of the teacher to present material clearly and concisely, but never dogmatically. Rather, he should strive for a dialogue between himself and the student so that ideas do not merely flit through the mind, but are instead grasped and comprehended. The good teacher will not demand mere repetition as the sophists do, but will strive to have his student know basic meaning instead of unrelated facts.

Socrates—Would you not also say that a teacher is one who should view every activity as containing some educational content so that learning is shown to be a continuing process?

Plato—That too seems true Socrates, and should it not be said that a good teacher is one who stimulates his pupils to further endeavors, and that his joy in being able to teach is apparent through his enthusiasm and wit.

Socrates—I must admit Plato, that all these attributes combined seem to adequately define a good teacher.

Plato—This may be true, but I now refer you to my original question. Where am I to find a perfect teacher?

Socrates—While at Delphi, the oracle spoke of such a man. In fact, he is affectionately called by your name. And it is to this man, Dr. Carroll S. Feagins, that the class of 1964 proudly dedicates their annual.

BETWEEN CLASSES

CURRICULUM

Guilford College has developed a progressive curriculum in which an effort is made to acquaint students with the basic ideas and philosophies of man. A liberal arts graduate should be intelligently conversant with the culture of his civilization in order to enter more fully into, and to contribute more significantly to, his social responsibilities and especially to stimulate and develop enriching avocational interests. Against the warp of historical perspective and understanding, each student begins the study of the individual growing into a personality which must adjust to the many complexities of modern life — the home, family, community, state, nation, and world. To develop more fully the intellectual design on the warp of history, man's greatest contributions in literature, the arts, religion, and philosophy must be understood and appreciated.

To facilitate success in college and insure the continuance of study later for vocational and avocational interests, Guilford College offers a series of tool courses. The tool courses are a continuation of training in essential tool subjects — English, at least one foreign language, fundamentals of mathematics, natural sciences and a survey of those areas where these techniques especially apply.

Within the liberal arts curriculum of Guilford College, students may prepare for a great variety of occupations. Faculty advisers help each one plan his educational program to fit him best for his career.

Each student is encouraged to get as complete a mastery of his field of intensive study as is possible in four years. This concentration in a major field is equivalent to approximately one-half of the four-year college course, involving a carefully planned sequence of courses in the major field and related subjects.

Guilford College recognizes that the total environment of the college community is in itself a powerful educator. To this end, care is taken to see that the intellectual, spiritual, and physical needs of the student are adequately met. Religious activities have always been important, and a full program of extra-curricular activities — social, dramatic, musical, and athletic — is within the reach of all. But the emphasis is on the unique influences of a college: those of the classroom and the library.

The 1964 QUAKER has been correctly called the students' yearbook. Twenty-two staff members combined their talents and ideas, and put forth many hours of hard work to produce this preview of Guilford College.

The cooperation of the QUAKER staff members, other interested students, and faculty members has been greatly appreciated, for without this cooperation the QUAKER could not be truly representative of the college.

CLUB

The fall production of the Revelers Club was Jean Anouilh's Antigone, a modern version of the fifth century Greek play. The scenery and lighting were very effective. Directed by Donald Deagon, the actors gave superb performances in their various roles. Bill Sternberg was excellent as the chorus. Ethelyn French as Antigone and Joel Ostroff as Creon, were particularly outstanding. Dave Parsons helped to relieve some tension with his convincing scenes as First Guard.

ACTIVITIES AT GUILFORD COLLEGE

Activities at Guilford are almost as diversified as the students themselves. Whether he is interested in religion, the deep mental contemplation of a game of chess, or the controversy of student government, the student is certain to find a club designed for himself.

By contributing to these various organizations the student experiences the self-satisfaction of not only having contributed to the group action but also having accomplished something himself. Among the many doors that are opened to the student, perhaps the most important is fellowship, the development of life-long friends and the ever present possibility of learning through active participation. Perhaps, too, in these four years he can cultivate a true sense of responsibility, a responsibility that he will carry with him in his later life and through which he is able to see himself mature mentally as he tackles and accomplishes more complicated challenges.

1963 FOOTBALL TEAM

Jimmy Williams, a figure of heroic stature, ran, passed, and kicked his way into Guilford College football glory in the 1963 season. Small in size but gigantic in athletic ability, the Sophomore sensation from Fuquay Springs was the big blast from Guilford's Shotgun offense as his incredible record indicates.

He shattered the Quakers' total offense record of 590 yards established by Little All American halfback John Meroney enroute to his league leading Carolinas Conference mark of 1,396 yards. Williams also captured the passing crown, hitting on 90 of 190 aerial attempts.

Williams' total yardage, 461 via land and 935 through the air, is second highest in the history of the conference. Though directing a club that failed to win in 10 games, the do-it-all Quaker gained a berth on the All Conference team and earned Honorable Mention on the All State club.

In addition to leading the Quakers in passing, rushing, and total offense, he paced the club in scoring with five touchdowns and passed for the other three, thus accounting for all eight Guilford touchdowns.

Amazing! And just for kicks, he punted 13 times for a solid 37-yard average.

Williams was the Quakers' big gun, without a doubt, but he was not the lone Guilford weapon. A pair of halfbacks, Buddy Dixon and Bill Joye, also got into the act.

Dixon, endowed with sprinter's speed, led the conference in pass receiving with 37 receptions for 374 yards.

Joye, experiencing his finest season, topped the club in punting with a hefty 38.8 average for 41 kicks and finished second only to Williams in rushing with 314 yards. He snared 26 passes for 287 yards and two TDs.

Eddie Gore, Guilford's "Mr. Unsung," filled in the Quakers' blocking bill from his fullback post. Utilized chiefly as a crushing ground gainer in high school, Gore made the transition to a "blocking back" in superb form.

The line play was anchored by guard Gary York, a 60-minute man, who detoured opposition ball carriers. Ends Lawrence Buffalo, Ken Griffith, and Larry Addleton, tackles Roger Purgason and George Wynne, guard Dwight Buffalo and center Sherrill Doby also gained raves for outstanding performances.

All are seniors with the exception of the Buffaloes and York in the forward wall.

Senior halfback David Odom, a defensive specialist, defensive halfback Jack Brinkley, who batted five extra points, freshman safety Danny McQueen and linebacker Bob Gauldin round out the defensive corps.

C Coach John Stewart, who most ably led Garner High to seven straight winning seasons before grobbing the reigns here, dipped liberally into his reserve troops last season.

The top subs include guard Dick Rankin, guard and linebacker Skipper Smith, tackle Gene Petty, linebacker John Van Ert, tackle George Scott, and flankers Bill Russell and Tommy Lovell.

All are rookies and all are prime candidates in Guilford's 1964 gridiron plans.

Centers Bob Frederick and Bob Gauldin earned starting status in early season, but both, along with Lawrence Buffalo were sidelined with injuries as the season wore on.

In spite of injuries and losses at key positions, Guilford keeps plugging, hoping and praying.

BASKETBALL

Matsinger pumps in two

THE GOOD FORTUNE THAT GUILFORD COLLEGE'S BASKETBALL TEAMS HAVE PURSUED FOR SO LONG, BUT WHICH HAVE SO OFTEN ELUDED THEIR GRASPS, DID NOT ESCAPE THIS TIME.

Back in September when the autumn leaves drifted softly to the earth, drifted with them the bright hopes of a successful coge season

Cooch Jerry Steele, young, but wise, hustled his troops through drills before the football team had even played their first game.

Starting rigid practice so early was tough, seemingly unbearable for some, for it made the season's grind longer. The price of success is high, though, but worth it

Through the first twenty games Guilford had carved twelve wins into the record book against eight losses, surpassing its 1962 mark by six wins and moving onto the threshold of a Carolinas Conference Tournament berth. The last time a Quaker team made a tourney-journey was in 1957

Regardless of the final outcome Guilford turned the tide of its previous hardwood fortunes and many figured heavily into the success story

Dan Kuzma, making his final, but unforgettable swing of an illustrious career, was never better. He scored. He rebounded. He was Guildford "Mr. Everything" and his statistic line is not deceiving.

Kuz, called by Steele "the best offensive player for his height" (6-2) that he has ever seen, blozied the nets for better than 23 points a game, grabbed more than 11 rebounds per tilt, and shot a torrid 60 per cent plus from the floor through the first 20 games.

The senior co-captain from Matawon, N. J., who can go inside with the big men and get job done, then move outside and do the same, was the Quaker's "bread and butter" man.

"Dan is deceptively quick," Coach Steele pointed out. "He has real good moves underneath, is a hardworker, and has improved with every season."

The great ones and the not so great ones come and go. Kuzma, gone, but never forgotten.

It may sound as if Kuzma was the whole show, but others played key roles.

Freshman sensation Charlie Black authored a superb beginning to what could well develop into an awesome cage career in Quakerville. The former Greensboro Grimsley star scored 11.1 points a game and pulled down 10.8 rebounds before becoming ineligible after the 15th game.

"If he becomes dedicated to his school work and improves defensively," said the Quaker Coach, "He can develop into a terrific ball player."

Bob Cousy deluxe. That's the name applied to Lloyd Turlington, who moved from forward to guard this season, then back to forward for the finish.

"Turlington adjusted to the guard spot real well," Steele said, "and that's a tough assignment."

A prolific scorer, the versatile junior did most of his point-making in the frontcourt and engineered Guildford's fast break in the backcourt.

Best defensive ball player on the club?

Answer — Elwood Parker, so says Steele and he knows.

"He's exceptionally quick, real steady, and hates defeat worse than anything in the world," the Quaker boss continued.

Parker, who seldom loses in the meantime, quarterbacked the club and in the meantime pumped in points at the rate of 11 point plus per game through the first 20.

Steele cited Mike Allred as the "best outside shooting forward and a valuable spot man."

"He has a good attitude to be a senior and not a starter," the Quaker Pilot continued. "He's done a dandy job as a spot man."

Chuck Scott, a transfer student who gained eligibility second semester, came fast once unharnessed.

Dan Kuzma and Elwood Parker
Co-captains

Quick, with great jumping ability, the ex-Greensboro Page standout is counted on heavily in future Quaker plans.

"Consistent. Never afraid to put him in, because I know what kind of job he'll do."

Those were the words Steele used to describe senior Bill Shirley, who also played a vital "Spot role."

Soft spoken and quiet about his regular school routine, but a big noise maker on the court. That's Wayne Matsinger, a multiple-talented freshman from Kernersville.

"He's a real hustler and can play guard or forward," Steele remarked.

Footballer David Odom, Paul Updegraff, and Gory Holparin provided plenty of depth in the Quaker backcourt.

Steele on Odom: "A good ball handler with good basketball sense. We used him in the 'slow down.' Could have been a top notch guard had he devoted four years to the game."

Odom, for the past two seasons, joined the team after football season.

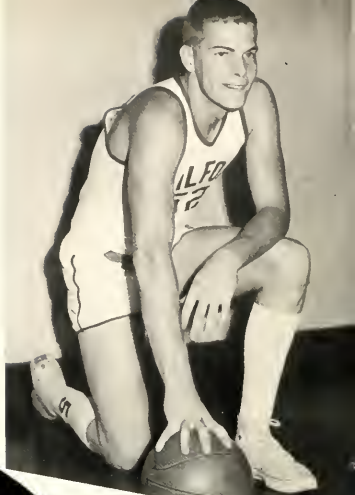

Steele on Updegraff. "Real good outside shooter."

Steele on Holparin: "A freshman with a lot of potential."

Hardwork, desire, determination, good support from the fans, etc., etc. Result — Success! And they'll remember this one.

GUILFORD COLLEGE PLAYED THE ROLE OF "LITTLE DAVID" AMONG SOCCER GOLIATHS LAST FALL AND THREE OF ITS SHOTS FELLED THE GIANTS.

The Quakers, competing in varsity play only for the second year, improved its mediocre 4-4 record of 1962 to an impressive 6-3 cord in 1963.

Guilford, under the clever guidance of coach Stewart Maynard, hung defeats on State, 4-1, Wake Forest, 2-0, Appalachian 2-0, and Coralina's Frash, 1-0 for its giant-killing heroics.

The 4-1 overtime win over State in the season's opener wrote an auspicious beginning for the Quakers and for Maynard, who took over the helm for the first time last year.

While rookies Kirk Russell and Juan Carlos Yorur, who hails from Chile, slammed in four goals apiece to spearhead the Quaker offense, junior goalie Andy Brown quelled numerous enemy scoring threats with aggressive defensive maneuvering.

Maynard, a strict disciplinarian, regards Russell as one of the state's top players.

Generally, when a club compiles an impressive record, it takes more than two or three to complete the success story. Such was the case with Guilford.

Avub Watakila, and Washington Rakomo, Kenya's gift to Guilford soccer, and co-scoring champion Yorur were slowed down with injuries, but this formidable trio is expected to be working in high gear next year.

So with a host of lettermen returning in '63, the Goliaths might continue to have trouble avoiding "Little David's" shots.

CHEERLEADERS

The 1964 Guilford College Cheerleading Squad under the leadership of Kay Stabler, faithfully followed the Quakers from autumn until spring urging them on to victory and sticking by them through success and failure.

Not only are the girls to be commended for their high spirits and outstanding cheerleading, but also for their fine representation of Guilford College.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAM

The Girl's Basketball team, coached by Gwen Red-deck, were highly successful this year. They won every game, playing against such schools as Waman's College and Lenair Rhyne. The offense was capably handled by Brenda Gough and Martha Chilton, who are freshmen. They were most ably supported by Lydia Hendricks and Jeannine Voss, experienced players from last year.

Williams slops the ball from an Avery College player.

The defense goes after the ball.

Walker goes up for the rebound.

Chilton drives in for an easy lay-up.

GIRLS' IN

ALL-STAR CHAMPIONS

The best of Shore, two team defeated the New Dorm All-Stars to win the championship. The team is composed of Carol Lee, Page March, Ellen Bernstein, Tish Milner, Linda Clapp, and Susan Booth.

VOLLEYBALL

This intra-mural sport has more enthusiastic participation than any other. The teams were closely matched, making each game a hotly contested affair. The old champions, Founders and Hobbs, bowed to the upstarts from New Dorm And Shore

REGULAR SEASON CHAMPS

The New Darm team composed of Kaine Huddings, Brenda Gough, Bunny Brewer, Sue Roush, Libby Voss, Jan Lippencott, Bede Walker, Mary Harvin and Jane Benbow, won the regular season championship.
